

Divorce forum disputes: when dual nationality may not be a possibility

By Prof David Hodson OBE KC(Hons) MCI Arb

As there can be dramatic financial and other differences for an international family in proceedings in one country or another, jurisdiction is fundamentally important. It is sometimes based on nationality. But some countries prevent citizens having nationality of more than one country. International family lawyers need to be aware of which countries allow or prohibit dual nationality. David Hodson updates his 2017 article on the countries which prevent dual nationality.
